Overview

The Navy is adopting the commercial practice of having a more focused inventory of top selling merchandise and standardizing its basic merchandise among fleet stores. This Publication provides ships a stocking guide in an easy to read format that will allow the Fleet user to:

1. Determine how many line items are allowed for each retail department and category.

2. Identify both CARGO items and national "best sellers" in the commercial marketplace.

3. Provide a list of established top selling items from which the ship can choose to ensure that it stocks the best sellers.

4. Permit the ship the freedom to satisfy individual demands by allowing a limited number of "ship's choice" items.

Distribution. This publication will be updated and distributed no less than quarterly, and/or as required.

Guide Headings

1. CARGO. Merchandise that can be obtained from CLF ships.

2. National Best Sellers. Using national sales data, the guide identifies "commercial best sellers' that if stocked would align a ship's stock to the national best sellers. In a commercial setting this list would be the commercial vendor's "never run out of" listing of the items. Each of these items has a stock number to permit easy identification and ordering.

3. Authorized Stock Count. This heading shows the maximum number of items that can be selected for a department from the shopping guide. The shopping guide contains a total of 604 items that could be selected. Provides a list of items by retail department which have a proven Fleet sales history.

4. Additional Items Allowed but not on Shopping Guide. This heading shows the maximum number of line items that are ship's choice. In retail, items change sizes, are deleted by manufacturers, and there are always new items surging in popularity. This stocking guide provides the ships the opportunity to stock items they feel they need to meet the needs of their crew that may not be on the "best seller list" as well as provides an "inventory slot" for items coming into or out of stock and still be within the maximum line items allowed.

5. Not to Exceed. This heading shows the maximum number of line items that are allowed for your size ship.

6. Item Identification.

a. Items marked with an "X". These items are national best sellers available in each zone.

b. Items not marked with an "X". These items have proven sales history, but may not be listed in all zones, and may have a different stock number for each zone. Users should identify the item from the list and check the latest ACB and ASL to determine it's availability in the zone.

How to use This Guide as a Stocking Guide in 4 easy steps

1. Determine what the maximum numbers of line items are allowed in total and in each department.

2. Determine what will be stocked from the shopping guide staying within the limits for authorized stock count.

3. Determine if there are any "local choice" items for each retail department, being careful to not exceed the authorized maximum number as well as allow for "slots" for new items to be introduced and old items to be sold out.

4. Select the items that give the crew a good cross section of merchandise and that meet customer desires.

Procurement

Remember - the basis of procurement is the proper balance between what is carried in stock and what is actually sold. The four basic guidelines to be followed are:

- 1. Follow the recommendations of the Merchandise Stocking Guide.
- 2. Don't be sold "buy" (know your needs and buy accordingly).
- 3. Don't buy the same kind of products that would compete with each other.
- 4. Use ethical standards in procurement.

The following basic polices should be observed:

1. Limit procurement to a minimum number of brands or price lines needed to service the maximum number of patrons.

2. Purchase only from the vendors on the Automated Contract Bulletins and Automated Ships Store Listings (ACB/ASL Catalogs) that sell items on the stocking guide.

3. Review stock records periodically and make adjustments where necessary.

4. Plan procurement based on stable year round items and seasonal merchandise.

a. For seasonal merchandise, plan well in advance to ensure that it will be received and placed on sale before the season starts.

5. Always consider on-hand position of identical or similar items. Similar items should not be procured when there is old and slow moving merchandise on hand because it will place the new merchandise in competition with the old, slow moving material.

Procurement can be relatively simple and effective when done in a systematic manner, or it can become an incessant headache when sound and proven merchandise techniques and proper stock control procedures are disregarded.

MERCHANDISING TIPS

Here are some merchandising tips to assist in the efficient operation of ships stores:

Display of Merchandise. An important factor contributing to the promotion of sales is the orderly and neat presentation of merchandise to the patrons of the store. For example, merchandise displayed in a disarranged fashion lacks sales appeal since the acceptance of a product must first meet approval of the eye before any other factors such as price, quality, and brand are considered. A neatly painted store is essential. The lighting must be adequate and aimed at making merchandise stand out.

Arrangement of Stock. All items should be arranged on the shelves by categories and utility relationship (i.e., shaving creams, razors, razor blades, after-shave lotions, etc.) to assist the patrons in locating the items they want.

Inventories should be watched constantly to determine if sales for a particular item are poor. Upon determining that any item is slow moving or is dead, every effort should be made to get rid of it, either by returning the product to the vendor, if possible, reduction in price, or by transfer to other supply officers.

Markdowns should be prominently displayed for customer's view so that reduced prices can be readily seen. In modern retail merchandising it has been solidly established that markdowns are an inherent necessity, to assist in disposition of dead stock.

Other methods for disposing of dead stock are use of "combination sales," such as a razor and shaving cream at a reduced price, or two related items for the price of one when both items are found to be slow moving. Sales at reduced prices may not give the store the desired profit at the time markdowns are taken, but should preclude tying up working capital and should prevent future surveys which are a total loss to the store.

Visual Merchandising. Visual merchandising support services are available from most Navy Exchanges and can be obtained by ships stores. Services will be provided during inport periods from a Navy Exchange servicing the local area. Refer to the P-487, paragraph 2003, for complete details.
